List Of Safe Burning Rules

The Virginia Division of Forestry in an effort to urge the public to practice safe burning manners, lists below the rules to follow to keep fires from escaping:

1. From March 1 to May 15, burn only between 4:00 p.m. and 12 midnight if the fire is within 300 feet of inflammable material. This is the law.
2. Don't burn, even after 4:00 p.m. if it is windy.
3. Stay with the fire and have tools and extra help to keep the fire from escaping.
4. Burn only in small piles of brush or other debris.
5. Make sure the fire is completely extinguished before leaving it
6. Check the fire the next morning to be sure there are no hot ashes.
7. Crush cigarettes and use the ear ash tray.
8. Keep matches away from children.
9. Make sure the barrel you burn in is covered with a fine mesh wire.
10. Break your match before throwing it away.

Bert Dodson Speaks To Ruritans

Dodson spoke on citizenship responsibility and respojsibility of public office holders. Bert Dodson told the club membership there were many in public office who served the privileged few and were guided by pressure groups and dictated to by the so called "Courthouse Clicks." Dodson says this responsibility lies in the hands of the citizenship to become of service, to assume more responsibility by displaying leadership in whatever station we may hold. Dodson made a short review of history back to the time of the great leadership of Jesus down through the years, giving countries, national leaders, state and community leaders, and discussed the responsibility each assumed and how each lost the leadership as time passed. Bert Dodson is a candidate for State Senator for the new senatorial district consisting of Amherst, Appomattox, Buckingham, Campbell and Nelson counties.

Rural Electrification Strengthens Rural Security

Director C. S. Dodd of Charlotte Courthouse

Delegate John H. Daniel of Charlotte Courthouse

Charlotte Member of General Assembly Sees Positive Benefits From Cooperative

Rural people seem to be the solid backbone of security in these fast moving times of progress, and maybe the comforts and efficiency available from electricity on the farm and in the rural home has made an unknown contribution in building this feeling.

This statement came from Delegate Jack Daniel of Charlotte Court House as an appraisal of the rural electrification program as he knows it, as he talked with C. S. Dodd, also of Charlotte County and a member of the 10 man board of directors of the Southside Electric Cooperative.

Mr. Dodd is a member of the board which directs the 19-county member-owned rural electric system serving more than 17,200 rural families in Southside Virginia.

"I have always been interested in the development and progress of the Southside Electric Cooperative," Mr. Daniel told Mr. Dodd, "for I think that the availability of electricity to the rural homes and farms has been a major contributing factor in this state and nation.

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "my interest in rural people is just natural.

"Rural people seem to be the solid backbone of security in these fast moving times of progress, and," he added, "maybe the comforts from the availability of electricity on the farm and in the rural homes has made an unknown contribution in building this feeling.

People Important

"People are important," Mr. Daniel said, "and whenever any step in progress is planned without the interest of the people at heart, that step is dangerous.

"But I feel that the rural electrification program has always had the interest of the rural people at heart and they know it, and that is why I believe it has contributed so much to the feeling of security among our rural folks.

"I would not try to evaluate the various parts of this program," he continued, as he talked with Mr. Dodd about the importance of electricity to rural people. "I would just say that the leaders of the Southside Electric Cooperative have certainly accomplished almost the impossible.

"Often," he pointed out, "a new adventure in progress—and rural electrification was a great, new adventure—meets with opposition and obstacles only those who direct it can understand and evaluate and handle.

"You have had many of these obstacles, and in my experiences with your organization, you have met them with study and the benefits of professional guidance and handled them—always with the interest of the people, your members, at heart.

Rural Security

"It is for this reason that I feel you have given to rural people a certain element of security which appears to be stronger there than anywhere else. I don't know what it is, but it is there—and you members of the board of directors and your operating management are to be congratulated for your success in meeting the obstacles and turning them into a program of security and progress for rural Virginians in my section of this state, anyway."

Mr. Dodd's discussion with Delegate Daniel is part of a policy of the members of the board of directors of the Southside Electric Cooperative to meet with civic and community leaders and learn from them the needs of the rural people and fit these needs, wherever possible, into the plans as they are made at the monthly meeting of Southside Electric Cooperative's board of directors.
